A ride on Indiana Jones' tracks

Deep abysses, seething lava, 30m high waterfall, explosions or thick fog – that is the "Höllenblitz". At 80 kilometres an hour, the 860-meter-long route through the old mine is a breathtaking adventure journey with great sound effects and one of the most modern laser shows.

The "Höllenblitz" is the largest indoor roller coaster in the world – in the dark and without loops. "The facility is at amusement park level," say critics. Klaus Renoldi jr. is a fan of the Indiana Jones movie, so he wanted to recreate a fast-paced indoor roller coaster ride in an old mine.

The ambitious project with the elaborate decoration and technology has to be transportable in the end. After two years of planning, he had managed to turn his dream of an attractive ride into reality.

The "Höllenblitz" was set up on the "Cannstatter Wasen" for the first time in 2007 and – to the delight of Renoldi jr. many visitors also liked the topic.
